The counseling profession has long recognized that what benefits the client should drive both the design and delivery of effective counseling services. The emergence of technology-assisted counseling interventions (Distance Counseling) continues to offer both challenges and opportunities for counselors to reach a wider variety of clients. Ongoing research suggests that Distance Counseling may afford certain benefits that are not typically present within face-to-face counseling models. It is becoming increasingly apparent that certain clients may actually prefer Distance Counseling services. At the same time, it is clear that the utmost professional care must go into the architectural design and delivery models of Distance Counseling services.

ReadyMinds has received national recognition for its professional achievements in the area of Distance Career Counseling. As an “Approved Provider” for Continuing Education hours through the National Board For Certified Counselors, Inc. and Affiliates (NBCC®), ReadyMinds offers several Distance Counseling Training options for counselors who are interested in learning more about providing the highest quality services in this emerging counseling specialty. Please click on the following training program descriptions for complete details.

Distance Credentialed Counselor (DCC) Training Program - ReadyMinds, the leading provider of Distance Career Counseling along with the Center for Credentialing and Education, Inc, (CCE, an affiliate of the NBCC®) is pleased to announce its Distance Credentialed Counselor Training Program. Click here for the training schedule and locations. This training is of great benefit to counselors in a wide range of settings, including colleges and universities, community colleges, schools K-12, One-Stop Career Centers, employee assistance programs, human resources, counseling and social service centers and private practice. It sets the standard for expertise in this evolving practice specialty. If you qualify to obtain the DCC Credential, you will be nationally recognized as a professional with training in best practices in Distance Counseling. Additionally, if you are a National Certified Counselor, you will receive 15 continuing education hours for your participation in this two-day DCC training.