Putting the Pieces Together

Koury Sheraton Convention
Center, Greensboro NC
October 6-7, 2011

North Carolina budget numbers are out, and again, the educational budget has been reduced at the same time enrollment is increasing. Community colleges across the state are being asked to do more with less, an increasingly familiar mantra. At the same time, the face of Developmental Education in North Carolina is undergoing a fundamental overhaul that will change the structure of the standard course and classroom setting. The Developmental Education Initiative teams are working to streamline content into focused courses that remove the repetition in the traditional model and only deliver information needed by the students.

As Developmental educators, the questions arise, "How do I make all of the pieces fit together to ensure the best quality education for my students? How can I deliver the best education possible with limited resources and changing criteria?"

Join NCADE on Thursday and Friday, October 6 and 7, at Koury Sheraton Convention Center, Greensboro, NC, for some answers to these questions and offer any insights and information to help your colleagues smoothly transition into the many changes ahead for Developmental Education.

Procedure for Submitting Proposal

1. Complete the "Workshop Proposal Form."
2. Attach a typewritten 200-word description to your workshop form describing the format, objectives, and content of your presentation.
3. Attach an abstract (30 - 50 words) of your presentation. This abstract will appear in the conference program if the proposal is accepted.
4. Mail your proposal package to:

*Samantha Spencer
