

Painting Realistic Textures

Summer Camp at Cape Fear Community College

Discover how to add realistic texture and detail to your work.

Have you ever viewed a painting of an animal that was so realistic, you could almost tell how soft its fur must be? Or landscapes where you imagine you could almost sit on the lush grass, or hear the crunch of dry leaves under your feet? Painters use a variety of techniques to give the illusion of texture – an important element that adds detail, depth, atmosphere and realism to a painting.

In this four-day camp, you will learn methods for painting interesting and realistic textures with oil paint. Instructor Amy Gibson, an accomplished artist who specializes in three-dimensional, hyperrealistic oil painting, will show you how to paint fluffy clouds, lifelike fur and hair, detailed grass, vivid sunsets and more! Course work includes lessons in brush handling, controlling oil paint, mixing and applying color, understanding composition and color values, along with lots of fun texture painting exercises.

This camp is perfect for a beginning oil painter who wants to elevate their work by learning to add realistic texture and detail.
